Dear Les

Seen the slides.

I think that sickle trait did play a role in the death, along with all the other possibles (drugs, excited delirium, restraint, posture etc). Not possible to quantify the contribution of course.

Do you want my short report with all the duty to the Court material plus a mini-CV, or will a straight letter to you do?

I will not put this in my report, but from what I can see of the scenario: the police officers involved should not be prosecuted assuming they approached and restrained BAYOT in the normal approved fashion, appropriate for the perceived risk.

There is a discussion to be had concerning whether a differential police approach is needed for subjects who are known to have a predilection (albeit uncommon) for sudden death under stress, even if they knew the fact in advance. An endless moral maze there.....

Hi Les,

As per Alasdair's request, here are the encrypted copies of the productions. I have listed the passwords below. I will send them individually due to their size.
